1. As of late April, North Korean citizenship certificates were being reissued, and cost a large sum. A permit required for travel was being issued by the local People's Committees or the interior police. Licenses to open restaurants and other businesses also cost large sums.

2. Pyongyang prices are approximately seven times greater than in June 1950. American uniform trousers cost 6,000 North Korean won, army boots are 3,000 won, and a small mal of rice is 2,000 won. Medicine is obtainable only on the streets by bartering food.

3. The use of ROK won is banned and people found with large quantities of ROK won are picked up by members of the North Korean State Security Bureau. There is frequent exchange of North Korean won for Chinese Communist currency. Fake North Korean won notes have been in circulation.
